Author's Note

Motivation for writing of this book consists in looking for answers to questions the author asked himself from the very beginning of his life. It took a lot of time to become ready for writing a manuscript. After the birth, it was simply ugly, but during existence it became better and better. Development of the manuscript affected positively the author's own way of the world view. We assume that world is not only what we get through perception, but something else, what we can feel and think about. It was evident that we need some unknown X, which can help us build holistic world view. The book bases on assumption that there are creatures called spirits and there is a spiritual world, where they are habitants. A materiel living thing implements a spirit having materiel determinate being. This is quintessence of this monograph. Human spirit is like a source with crystal-clear water, which founds its way from the depths of the universe into material existence being delightful to the mind as cool water for the thirsty lips. Everyone drinks from it. Evenings this unfailing source is almost empty, mornings however it is again full. This book is like water from this source. Material of the book's considerations comes from what the author experienced and what he maintains was given him as revelation. The reader is free to make comparison with his own experiences and visions; author has profound respect with reader's sophistication. The author hopes also to inspire the reader to do deeper thoughts as before about his being and to form new conceptions about the world and him self. Message of the book comes from the history of author's own life. All results here build undoubtedly a theory, but not a science in common sense, while it would be impossible to reproduce and to recreate these ones in an experiment. But it is nevertheless a truly science for the author. Value of this theory consists in helping any other one to find own way to him in and outside self sharing experience got on this way. Such sharing of information makes out essence of the spiritual world. Commonly value may have here not only written details, but also author's approach to consideration. Spirit or not spirit is human? - That is our question. What is spirit if he is not human? Or what is a human, if he doesn't notice himself to be spirit? – We want to investigate all these staff in this book and to come closer to one or more possible answers. Let us face this challenge!
